After the business meeting, the commencing of the eighteenth birthday of an old and honored member of the chapter, Mrs. Sanders Johnson, opened the evening's entertainment. As the cake with lighted candles, encircled by a wreath of pink carnations, was placed upon the stage, the regent, Mrs. Charles W. Richardson, requested the audience to arise and join hands, and being led by Miss Lydia Bigelow, a member of the Rubenstein Club, the entire assembly joined in singing "Blessed Be the Tie That Binds" and "Auld Lang Syne."

The State regent, Miss Hilda Fletcher, spoke feelingly of the faithful service Mrs. Johnson had given the national society for twenty-three years as editor of the Lineage Book and the publishing under her direction of forty-five volumes upon that subject.

The regent then gave the chair to Mrs. Du Boise, who read one of the evening's program, which consisted of papers read by several of the historians, the subjects being "The Life of Abraham Baldwin," "Some Women of the Revolution," and papers on Benjamin Ogle and John Paul Jones.
